Investor's Pitch Deck

Problem Statement

Lack of Online Marketplace

No centralized platform offers a vast variety of toys, limiting convenience and accessibility for consumers.

Reduced Interest in Physical Toys

Overexposure to mobile devices has shifted children's focus away from physical toys, which are a stepping stone in building a good IQ level as well as a nourishing mental health

Offline-Dominated Sales

Consumers prefer buying toys in physical stores to assess quality, leading to a limited online presence for toy retailers.

Stifled Innovation

A risk-averse environment hinders the development of novel toy concepts, resulting in a stagnant market and missed opportunities to engage a new generation of children.

High Prices

The current toy market faces zero-competition environment primarily catering to a premium segment, which leads to offering high-priced products that are inaccessible to a significant portion of the population.
